Commentary – 2nd Quarter

In our view, the outlook for European stocks will remain positive in the short term, with European exporters likely to be aided by the recent weakness of the euro. However, it remains our view that the open-ended programme of quantitative easing (a central bank policy designed to stimulate the economy) announced by Mario Draghi in January is unlikely to address Europe's more fundamental structural problems. Indeed, our investment style is not based on any easy 'macro' improvement. Rather it is based on an unremitting adherence to key company characteristics that have served us well in a range of economic scenarios: strong products or services; pricing power; secular demand growth; and an ability to shape the company's future. Changing consumer behaviour together with technology advances creates plenty of challenges and opportunities; we believe that our process for identifying them is still an appropriate one.

Objective

The Fund objective is to achieve long-term capital growth by exploiting special investment opportunities in Europe.

Fund Manager Style

Alexander is a manager who seeks to build a portfolio of 'world class' companies that are able to sustain profit growth and margins over a long period of time. He looks for companies with a good track record of profitability, a proven product and business model, combined with evidence of entrepreneurial endeavour and the prospects of above average growth opportunities.

Geographical and sector weightings play little part in his investment strategy. Instead, he builds his portfolios around companies whose products or services are in universal demand and are not especially price-sensitive. Almost invariably, he seeks to invest in companies whose prospects depend as far as is reasonably possible on their own efforts and not on factors beyond their control.

Alexander's view is that his portfolio should be regarded as a collection of dynamic, long-term growth companies, based in Europe, that are exposed to growth in global trade and productivity. On that basis, he tends to hold stocks for the long term and runs a concentrated portfolio of companies that he talks to regularly and knows thoroughly.

Fund Manager

Alexander Darwall

Alexander Darwall trained as an investment analyst with de Zoete & Bevan (BZW) before moving to Enskilda Securities in Paris in 1987, where he became Head of French Equity Research. He joined Goldman Sachs in London in 1992, again as a French equity analyst. In 1995, Alexander moved to Jupiter to run the European portion of a number of segregated pension fund accounts, subsequently taking responsibility for other accounts including County Council pension funds (European portion). At the start of 1999, he took over the management of a European Equities Investment Trust, and subsequently the roll over vehicle, which launched in November 2000. In January 2001, Alexander became Fund Manager of a UK domiciled European ex-UK equities fund and is head of Jupiter's European Equity Team. Alexander has managed the Jupiter European Growth SICAV since April 2007.
