Credit Ratings

One of the ways to assess the level of counterparty risk is by reviewing the counterparty's credit ratings. Credit ratings are an assessment of how creditworthy an organisation is. This is based on an organisation's history of borrowing and repayment, as well as the level of assets and level of debts. They are provided by independent private companies known as rating agencies and are reviewed on a regular basis.

Credit ratings are provided for information purposes only and Irish Life does not accept any responsibility should the deposit provider default on any deposit investment repayments. It is the customers responsibility to do the appropriate due diligence and assess their own suitability for any deposit investments. Current credit ratings are correct as at 12 May 2016 and these may change from time to time.

Please visit www.moody's.com and www.standardandpoors.com for further information on the ratings.

Self-Invested Fund risk rating

The risk rating of the Self-Invested Fund is 7. The Self-Invested Fund might suit the customer if they would describe themselves as an adventurous investor, are looking for very high potential returns over the long term and are willing to accept the significant ups and downs along the way. In the case of deposit investments in the Self-Invested Fund this would include a risk of losing some or all of their deposit investment. Further information on the Self-Invested Fund is set out in 'Your guide to the Self-Invested Fund'.

When investing in a deposit in the Self-Invested Fund the customer should consider the following:

- They are happy they understand the risk associated with deposits available through the fund and have considered the need for diversification.
- They understand they hold the counterparty risk with any deposit and are comfortable with that exposure.
- They understand that monies committed to a term deposit may not be realisable before the deposit matures.
- They will have a substantial overall pension fund of which only a small proportion will be invested in these deposits.
- They will have sufficient other money invested across a diversified range of unrelated assets such that even after a full or partial loss of this deposit fund their remaining fund would meet their desired retirement planning needs.
- Irish Life is contractually obliged to pay to customers what it receives from the deposit provider. Irish Life will not use any of its reserves to make up any shortfall.
